

Oasmia is looking for a Logistics Manager

At Oasmia Pharmaceutical AB we are developers of a new generation of drugs within the fields of human and veterinary oncology. We aim to develop and manufacture novel anti-cancer formulations based on well-established cytostatics which, in comparison with the current alternatives, demonstrate improved properties, a reduced side-effect profile and an expanded therapeutic area. Our suite of oncology products in development is based on our proprietary research within nanotechnologies and company patents.

Job description

In this role you will lead and develop the Logistics and Purchasing department.

It's partly an operative role where you manage the day-to-day operations, making sure that everything is running satisfactory. A strong focus lies on developing the operational business in a time of change; working towards an increased level of maturity and effectivity within material planning, purchasing, distribution, warehousing and CMO management.

As the Logistics Manager you play a key role in our collaborations with our CMOs, actively driving our partnerships forward.

The Logistics Manager has a broad area of responsibility within the Supply Chain, from purchasing of raw material and warehousing, to distribution of finished product to end customers, via distribution partners.

Our working environment adheres to strict requirements for quality and process management, and you are in charge of ensuring that our routines and processes are effectively managed and that the data in our quality system is updated and relevant for your areas of responsibility.

You will be leading a team of two Logistics Specialists and you will be reporting to Head of Supply Chain.

About Oasmia

Would you like to work in an expansive and flexible company that believes in the individual and their desire to take on responsibility and develop?

We are looking for someone who via their dedication and engagement wants to contribute in the future success of Oasmia Pharmaceutical AB. Oasmia currently has approx. 60 employees. We can offer you an exciting working environment with many opportunities for development and where respect, loyalty and dedication are valued ingredients of our corporate culture.

Qualifications

You have a university college degree in economics, logistics and/or purchasing, and several years of work experience in logistics and purchasing, preferably in different positions.

You are driven and skilled when it comes to leading, organizing and completing various tasks and projects within set deadlines.

You have very good computer skills.

Excellent communication skills are essential in this role as it involves a large and varied contact area, both internally and externally and it's important that you can speak and write fluently in Swedish and English.

The following experiences are considered as merits; material planning, project management, negotiations and working in a GxP environment.

Position and location

The position is a permanent full-time employment, probationary period applies.

The position will be based at Oasmia's head office at Vallongatan 1 in Uppsala, Sweden.
